1. Why are you leading this trip with the Fuller Center?

This will be my fifth global build. The prior locations I have served include Haiti, Puerto Rico, Peru, and Armenia. During my fourth build in Yerevan the trip lead asked if I was ready to facilitate a team. I was ready to go in 2020 but suddenly a pandemic got in the way. We are now ready to get back to our work and I am excited to lead our team through an amazing build.

I have a background in restaurant development, executive sales, and business consulting. The lion share of my time now resides in being a college instructor and traveling during my off term to meet incredible people like you.

2. What schedule do you have planned for the week? Any specific R&R plans?

I am hard pressed to give you a schedule as every trip I have been on flexibility was the most important tool to pack in your tool belt. You can view the rough schedule on the Thailand fact page, but plans can change. What I can promise is you will work each day, have amazing meals, and see a part of the world in a way that no tourist will ever experience.

3. What do you envision for devotions or reflections during your trip?

I believe it is paramount to end each day sharing individual experiences with your team. Looking back on the day behind us to discuss when we found joy, moments of awakening and times when we witnessed fellowship.

Every build I have been on has been personally transformational and the only people who truly know what you are feeling will be your team. Take the time to share and connect with your fellow builders who can potentially become lifelong friends. I find it amazing that we all travel from different parts of the world for one moment in time and become a family for twelve days. This is in no way a coincidence. We have been brought together for a reason and we will celebrate our time with tears, sweat, and a healthy dose of laughter.

4. What else do you want your participants to know about this trip?

This will be a remarkable trip where you will receive tremendous opportunities to assist building generational homes for the families of Lampang. Your muscles might ache by the end of the day, but your heart and soul will be full. The most important coaching I can give is

- Be flexible
- Be respectful as we are guests
- Be a team player
- Enjoy the moment
